

I oppose loosening the rules designed to promote and protect diversity of media ownership. These rules were adopted to ensure that the public would receive a diverse range of viewpoints from the media, and not simply the opinions of a handful of media conglomerates.

Do larger media companies strengthen, or weaken, access to diverse reporting and analysis? Has media concentration increased, or diminished, the ability of the news media to engage in a critical "watchdog" role over private and public interests? These are only a few of the many questions that the FCC needs to consider before loosening the ownership rules still further.
